"SPACECAMP"

Announcement Story

"SpaceCamp," a thrilling contemporary adventure about a group of teenagers whose summer at a camp for future astronauts turns into an unexpected space shuttle voyage, opens _____ at the _____ Theatre.

Inspired by the real-life United States Space Camp at the Space and Rocket Center in Huntsville, Alabama, "SpaceCamp" is executive produced by Leonard Goldberg ("WarGames"). It stars Kate Capshaw ("Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom") as Andie, a camp instructor and an astronaut who has not yet fulfilled her dream of space flight; Lea Thompson ("Back to the Future") as Kathryn, a serious-minded young lady who is determined to become an astronaut; Tate Donovan in his feature film debut as the brash but likable Kevin, who discovers the spirit of teamwork at Space Camp; Kelly Preston ("Secret Admirer") as Tish, a lady with a photographic memory and a passion for the fashions of Cyndi Lauper and Madonna, who proves to be less frivolous than she first appears; Larry B. Scott ("Revenge of the Nerds") as Rudy, a young man for whom Space Camp provides the key to self-confidence; Tom Skerritt ("Top Gun") as Zach, a former astronaut and the head of Space Camp; and screen newcomer Leaf Phoenix as Max, a star-struck youngster whose dreams of space adventure come true in a way that exceeds his wildest expectations.

Harry Winer directs this ABC Motion Pictures presentation, produced by Patrick Bailey and Walter Coblenz for distribution by Twentieth Century Fox.
